

If child care works B.C. works! If you stop the flow of money parents can't afford child care. Parents have to not go to work. If they can't go to work they do not get any money. If they can't get any money they can't pay taxes. If they can't pay taxes you aren't getting any money. If you can't get any money you can't afford to run B.C. If you can't run B.C. it will be a mess. If B.C.'s a mess no one will want to move there and they will want to move away. If you have everyone move away you have no taxes. If you have no taxes well you just aren't a government now are you?

By Liam W. age 8.

This is a letter from Liam, a child who attends a local afterschool program, to the government.

Over the next nine months, the BC Government is going to cut 35 to 40 million dollars from childcare programs here in BC.

The number of available spaces will decline, and the quality of childcare will drop off significantly.

Simply put, childcare programs as we know them will cease to exist.

You tell 'em, Liam.
